OUR STORY

Born from renowned fine-dining restaurant Larkspur in Vail, Colorado, Larkburger represents chef Thomas Salamunovich's desire to bring the hallmarks of fine dining to the masses. He's done this by creating a menu of American favorites using premium ingredients in savory and sophisticated flavor combinations, prepared using classic cooking techniques. For us, that desire has grown into a movement...

CULINARY FOR THE PEOPLE!

It's why we cook every beef and tuna burger to the guest's desired temperature. We make all of our sauces and dressings from scratch each day. We ripen our tomatoes to perfection in a ripening cabinet in our kitchen. We cut our fries by hand. We prepare our beef patties and marinate our chicken in-house. We obsess over every detail to honor and share our love for the art of cooking.

Take one look at our waste containers and you will also see our obsessive commitment to sustainability. That commitment allows us to have the smallest trash can in the restaurant business!

How is this possible? Outside of our condiment packets and milk and juice cartons, all of our packaging is biodegradable and compostable. Every napkin, utensil, wrap, cup, bag, box and straw gets composted at Larkburger. In addition, our fry oil is recycled and converted into alternative fuel, 100% of our electricity usage is offset by purchased wind credits, our dining room chairs are made from recycled materials and our walls are clad in reclaimed cypress wood.

It's food and a dining environment you can feel better about. Enjoy!
